

Social score – instrument for more effective social politics

Josef Myslín

Abstract: The goal of modern society is also creating of system, which is effective in short and long term and which brings maximal effect for society as well as for individual. This effect is optimal in case of motivation of maximum amount of people to use their ability for building society and for ensuring their pleasure. There is necessity to prevent reducing activities in the society to economical things. Economical aspects are subject of science in many years, but another aspects are overlooked. This article tries to find another view and find partial solution of this problem how to build social-market economy

Keywords: social system, social score

JEL classification: H53,H55, H75